Lifecycle Footprint

The Lifecycle Footprint is an inventory of processes your application or product development cycle. The subsequent documentation shows - from a neutral point of view - the current situation and potential for action and recommendations for further steps.

If you answered "no" to one or any of the following questions or if you have any hesitation, than this means that, the lifecycle footprint is the next important step for your company

- Are my processes consistently defined across the entire lifecycle?
- Are the essential steps documented, communicated for appropriate processes?
- Are they accepted and concerned by all stakeholders?
- Do appropriate tools support the process chain?
- Are your processes effective?

Benefits

Neutral evaluation and presentation of the lifecycle documentation and decision support to budget resolutions.

High quality of the results is achieved by standardized methods for the preparation, implementation and documentation.
